

Course Delivery Method:	Classroom Meeting	Virtual Meeting	Online (Web)
How will the course be delivered?	Classes are taught on-campus during the times listed in the Class Schedule. If feasible for course content, a concurrent virtual section can be offered with corresponding section(s). This is not required. CETL can help Merge Sections within Canvas.	Classes taught via Zoom (or similar technology) during the times listed in the Class Schedule. Can be offered concurrently with an in-person class. To connect a virtual section with an in-person class, the instructor should work with their departmental scheduler via CLSS. CETL can help Merge Sections within Canvas. A limited number of classes are offered as stand-alone virtual courses	Classes taught asynchronously online using Canvas. These courses do not have a regularly scheduled meeting time.
Will students meet in an on-campus classroom?	Yes	No	No
Are students expected to attend classes at a designated time?	Yes	Yes	No

- Courses should be delivered in the format designated on the class schedule.
- Departments can add a concurrent virtual section to a class if desired via their departmental scheduler via CLSS.
- Students cannot switch attendance between in-person and virtual sections.
- Virtual and Online (web) courses carry a web fee of $35/credit. Fees cannot be waived.
- See the Class Search about virtual, online, videoconference, Polya courses available at various UI locations. Click 'Advanced Search' and 'Instructional Methods' to search for course delivery options.
- Engineering Outreach has information about courses in Video format.
- Online Idaho also provides options for students to complete courses and are eligible for financial aid with a consortium agreement.
- Independent Study in Idaho offers many courses that count toward your degree, but these classes don't count toward your overall U of I credit load and can't be used toward financial aid status.